TELEGRAPHING.

The arrangements for Totegraphing are far more advance of anything of the kind ever offered to the public. A regular Telegraph Line is connected with the Institution with twenty branch offices in various parts of the city, where public business is transacted, and in which the studests of this Institution are permatted to practice. No regular office practice can be had in any other school of instruction in the country, without which no one can obtain a position as a practical operator. Young men are exclined against the ecentive representations of those who, without any feb facilities, pretend to trach Telegraphing. PATRONAGE.

This Institution is now enjoying the largest patron-trongge ever betowed upon any Commercial school in the State. Over five hundres students were in arten-dance the first year, and over seven hundred during the past year. ## BEN. BUTLER.

A Saxe-in Rhyme.

MY BILL ARP. Ben. Butler was a soldier bold As any man mought be. And o'er ye land was spread af ar His fame and infamic.

His holdness was ye theme of all, For in ve wars, ye see, He wot nor carred not whom he fought -Was friend or enemie.

In Charleston caucus he was swift Ye Southern "friends" to cheer. And urged them on ye bonds to break Of Union without fear, And when ye contest was begun.

With paixhan and petard, His "friends" sent for their best respects Ye fightting Beauregard.

Then anxious for ye fight was Ben. . As for yo fight he spails, And hastened to embrace his "friends" With anaconda's coils, He chargeth on ye Big Bethel,

But soon ye field he fled. Lest happlire ye cannon built Might shoot him off his head, He saileth for ye Orleans town, To knock ye rehels cold ;

And stole ye Smith his gold. Ben's brother rame ye cause to serve, And ye recellion stay ; And though ye ware much money cost, Ye Butler made it pay.

He chargeth on ye merchant man

Bold Ben, assaults ve innocents. He takes ye neutrals down ; He treats ye ladies of ye South As women of ye town.

For all his deeds ye name he won-"Fis known from South to East, And 'twill be sung in future song Ye Butler was ye beast. At mention of ye deeds in print,

Ben Bottled up his rage. Which was poured out on Grant his head, Yo captain of ye age. O I Sen., ye lienst, ye Eutler brave, Ye first of mitie men ;

In historic we cannot hope. To see ye like again.

Thus the government is kept in ignorance of the true state of the case. Of course. the causes of these outbreaks are never attributed to the agent, the honest triend (?) of the Indian. It is the opinion of all who have become, in any degree, acquainted with the character of these savages, and who are familiar with the facts of their outrages and barbarities, together with their mode of warfare, that the only way to make a permanent treaty with them is to act on Gen. Connor's plan. He remarked that he had made peace with them a number of times; but that now he was going-"make pieces of them." The only way in which they can be subdued, and made to sue for peace, is to carry war into their homes and villages. So long as a desultory have the advantage, and can keep out of the way of a superior force and they snap their fingers at the impotent efforts made to conquer them. But let the war be carried to their homes, and they will soon feel its effects. The Snakes and Bannacks were subdued in that way and they are now as pe acable as need to be. And for that service Gen. Connor received the severe censure of the government; and for punishing the bloody Sonx and Shisns last Fall between the North and South Platte, he is to be superceded, by a mere boy in ladian warfare. It is reported that the biatant General, who was going to have his head quarters in the saidle and had no lines of retreat laid out, but was going straight to Richmond, is to take Connor's place.
